Meet Peeta...

Peeta Tinay grew up in the San Francisco Bay Area. She was born into a family of creatives: her father a chemist by day and a jeweler by night, her mother a painter and weaver. Art work from both parents and their friends filled the house throughout her childhood. Her grandfather was an inventor, keeping a fully functional foundry and pattern shop behind the family home. Roaming through his old work buildings was always an adventure. This early creative environment was fertile ground through which she came of age and discovered her life’s work.

From 1990 to 2000 at The Caning Shop in Berkeley California she was introduced to techniques involved in the restoration of wicker furniture. In 2000 a move to Washington gave a fresh start motivating her to branch out. She continued restoring and also started making wicker pieces from the ground up using 1920's wicker as inspiration.

3 Day Basketry Workshop - 4 Inset Handle Basket

In this intermediate to advanced level three day basketry workshop students skills they have learned previously will be practiced, deepened and improved. This 4 Inset Handle Basket is made using the technique of twining and has a substantial rolled border. Multiple diameters of round reed are used throughout basket. In addition the round reed has been dyed black and brown adding to overall visual interest. Each step of the basket will be demonstrated and a lot of hands on instruction will be provided to students. Attention to hand placement, tension and shaping will be focused on during the workshop. The selection, preparation of materials and finishing techniques for basketry projects will be discussed as well.
This basketry project is a scaled down version of my large basket work. The same details and techniques I use on a large scale are present in this project.

-Students signing up for this workshop must have experience with twining.
-Hand strength is required for this workshop.
This is a rewarding and challenging intermediate/advanced level workshop suitable for weavers with experience.
The finished basket will measure approximately 6” tall by 20” diameter

Day 1:
The first day we will start off with looking at the basket samples and talk about the project. Then we will move onto what I call a "warm up" base start. This will be a base using #6 round reed and #2 bleached round reed. I will demonstrate how I start the base by showing my hand placement and tension on the materials. Students will then work for about 30 minutes on these basketry starts then set them aside. This warm up base is large enough to turn into a project in the future. The purpose of these bases is to have a good refresher of twining. The base for the 4 Inset Handle Basket is a focal point so we want the initial twining to be as nice looking as possible.
Students will then transition to the base for the 4 Inset Handle Basket. The techniques that will be discussed and executed during day one will be tension on materials, spacing of the spokes and the dome of the base.
The goal for the first day of class is to finish the basket base.

Day 2:
The second day of class students will start adding the side spokes to the base and start weaving up the sides of the basket. The techniques we will focus on during the day will be shaping, twining, materials placement, packing and placement of clamps to create the openings for the inset handles.
The goal for the second day of class is to have the weaving up the side of the basket finished.

Day 3:
The third day of class students will finish up any basket side weaving and placement of clamps for inset handles. We will then move onto the border. During the finishing of the basket each student will find a body placement and posture that works best for doing the border work.

During all three days of class we will discuss the materials used for the basket in terms of selection and the dyeing process. I will share and show all my techniques that are valuable for creating this basket.
